The scoop of the day

June 13 is National Kitchen Klutz Day

Kitchen Klutzes of the world, unite! Let's celebrate our skills in the kitchen (or lack thereof).

Kitchen Klutzes are the people who set out with the intention of being like Gordon Ramsey or Julia Child as they open up the cookbook. As they place the mixing bowl and ingredients on the counter, they imagine knife cuts as swift as Wolfgang Puck or Bobby Flay. However, reality quickly dissolves all those dreams as smoke billows from the oven, and they mistake salt for sugar. Those knife cuts turn bloody, and cookies and fingers are burnt. The Kitchen Klutz has struck, and visions of spilled milk are pitifully cried over.

On National Kitchen Klutzes Day, be safe. You can also try celebrating with these ideas:

- Laugh at yourself. Share your mortifying stories of kitchen failure over take-out Thai or pizza.
 - Give your favorite Kitchen Klutz the gift of cooking classes.
 - Watch your favorite cooking flops show.
 - Share your mishap stories on social media using the hashtag #NationalKitchenKlutzesDay. Don't forget the photos for a good laugh, too!
